

Guidelines for inputs on good governance:

Objectives of the input:

1. Facilitate appreciation of Mongolian governance context by:
 - a. Giving an overview of how Mongolian public officials understand the concept and value of good governance;
 - b. Highlighting key governance issues, and current efforts of the Mongolian government to address such challenges.
2. Facilitate understanding of how constructive engagement with citizens and social accountability contribute to efforts of Mongolian government towards good governance.

Questions:

- How do Mongolian public officials view good governance?
- What are the key issues and challenges in terms of achieving good governance in Mongolia – in terms of:
 - Transparency – making information on government programs and transactions available, accessible and understandable to the public
 - Accountability – government representatives being responsive and answerable to the public; getting feedback from citizens and acting on these feedback to improve service delivery
 - Participation – government providing spaces, systems and structures for citizen groups to participate decision-making and implementation; is there willingness to negotiate with citizens, and recognition of their rights to associate, access information, articulate their concerns and opinions, and participate in governance processes?
- How is Mongolian government addressing these issues?
